BIOGRAPHY

After arriving in North America about ten years ago with no money, no job and no connections, Abel Maxwell has become not only a recognized artist, verified and awarded by UNESCO for his community involvement, but also a best-selling author in Hollywood.

Often referred to by young people as the King of Francophone Afrobeats in Canada, he inspires them to believe in their ability to make a difference while maintaining a noble outlook on humanity's future.

Abel Maxwell Uses Music to Inspire People Never to Give Up

Music is the closest thing the world has to a universal language; a study performed by Harvard University scientists found that, of the 315 different societies of which they had records, all had mentions of music. The scientists also found that different types of songs, such as dance songs or lullabies, are ubiquitous across the world, and they even share certain musical features.
